

Local Woman Installed as President in State Association

LaRee Pedro

The Utah Homemakers State Association installed a Wasatch County woman as state officer last week during their forty second annual convention at the Raddison Hotel in Ogden, along with other council members.

Sharon Butterfield, out-going 1997 president, (Riverton), represented the association at the state executive council change over.

LaRee Pedro was installed as 1998 president. She will serve the 1998 year as president under current and assumed the leadership title during convention activities and installation. Mrs. Pedro is the wife of Harrison P. Pedro of Wallsburg.

Chapters throughout the state of Utah were represented during the convention which is organized to help develop programs, meetings and activities that are consistent with the purpose of sharing educational information, promoting stable homes and satisfying family living.

"The Utah Homemakers Association provides opportunities for homemakers to gain skills and activities that will contribute to interests and needs as homemakers, develop leadership, participate in community activities and contribute to the welfare of others.

"These strengths and bonds between the home and community were stressed as the women attended this year's conference.

"The local Wasatch chapter of the Homemakers Association holds their meeting the fourth Thursday of each month," said Pedro.
